The below submission has been lodged and confirmed on the AEMC Web site.

Submission Type: Rule Change

Reference: Improving the cost recovery arrangements for Transmission non-network options

Organisation: N/A

First Name: Grant

Last Name: Bird

Email: [REDACTED]

Phone Number: [REDACTED]

Comments: I disagree with Transgrid, or any other so-called "renewable" power company receiving MORE preferential treatment, and favourable dispensation to recover their costs for batteries or other Non Network Options (NNO's). Batteries have been going up in flames all over the globe, and taxpayers should not be asked to underwrite it in any way.

They have already been subsidised and given preferential treatment, and we, the people are NEVER listened to in various submissions we make. There is a groundswell of people awakening to the fact that a lot of lies have been told, and the batteries are not safe, nor reliable, nor able to store enough.

Compared to Coal, which is cheap, reliable, clean and green – batteries and the toxins they put out when they go up in smoke are carcinogenic and unhealthy.

NO, I do not want to pay for it, and if taxpayers actually knew about this (and I found out by a fluke of luck) they would be against it, because in the end, it WILL be passed onto them. People are sick and tired of their power bills skyrocketing and it contributing to the higher prices of food at the supermarket and just about everything else we buy.

It is a scam on the Australian people that we aren't listened to – only those with a bucket-load of money get to be really heard. I am sick of not being listened to, and the fake "listening tours", or "consultations".

I think you get the drift.
